Revolution Grows Across Europe

AS THE HOUR DRAWS NEARER for the eviction of the conqueror from the various enslaved lands of Europe, ominous hints of future friction among the citizens themselves appear more frequently. Some of this friction will be a reopening of old wounds. Some of it will result from new hates and grudges because of Quisling attitudes toward the Axis. Some of it will be along economic lines, always sharply defined wherever there is no great middle Yugoslavia is already a seething area involving all these differences. When Austria and Hungary were partitioned in 1919, new Balkan states, such as Czechoslovakia, were set up or former states were expanded Serbia was broadened into the kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes.

The Croats immediately formed their militant peasant party. The Slovenes also resented the alleged dominance of the Serbs, just as the north Slovaks and the Sudeten Germans resisted the Czechs.

Gen. Mikhailovitch, the able leader of the Yugoslav gorillas commonly known as the Chetniks, has been bitter in his opposition to the Germans and Italians. He has been one of the great hopes for Allied penetration of the Adriatic area. But the Croats and Slovenes accuse him of being too much a Serb, and the radical peasants and radical intellectuals say he is anti-

Undoubtedly, Mikhailovitch fears what many others fear-a Russian victory in the Balkans by the logical development of longlatent Pan-Slavism. Bulgaria, particularly, and possibly other Slavic states, may petition for admission into the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, just as Texas petitioned for and gained admission to the United States. The ferment of revolution deepens across Europe.

Pearl Harbor Responsibility Revealed in the White Book

ASTOUNDING REVELATIONS of the White Book issued by the State department are going to be hard for men in high places in our army and navy to explain. Our government was informed by at least two ambassadors to foreign countries that Japan was planning to attack Pearl Harbor.

What was done about it is not exactly clear. The only fact that is clear is that the Japs did attack Pearl Harbor and that had they known how much damage they did to our Pacific fleet they could have easily taken this important naval base.

Now it develops that months before the attack the Japanese tried to get President Roosevelt aboard one of their warships and presumably had the idea of launching the Pearl Harbor attack as soon as he was a prisoner. Knowing of the plans to launch an attack, Mr. Roosevelt declined

This White Book makes the record of Pearl Harbor look blacker and blacker. What it reveals calls for an explanation as to why the attack was allowed. The ousting of Admiral Kimmel and General Short after the attack isn't going to satisfy Americans. Even court martialing these men is not going to satisfy many citizens.

The proposed military trial of the admiral and the general is being delayed until after the war because of sensational facts it is likely to reveal. Attorneys might ask, for instance, why these two men are accused of negligence and their higherups are not charged with anything.

The painful fact remains that those responsible for lack of proper preparedness at Pearl Harbor had plenty of warning.

The Shuberts Want A One-way Street

IN GOTHAM, Lee and J. J. Shubert, the theatrical producers have gone to law to make the fact that they're sensitive to criticism a matter of legal record. Editors and Shuberts should be unanimous in hoping they lose the case.

The whole point of the lawsuit is that the Shuberts want the legal right to bar newspaper critics from performances of shows they produce. They're challenging the constitutionality of a state law which says that theaters must admit any ticketholder who is 21 or older.

Entirely outside the legal aspects of the case is the principle of the thing. It's an attack on a free press. It's an effort to eliminate the newspaper critic as a servant of the public-well, the theater-going public. It's an attempt to eliminate the newspaper critic, period. The newspaper critic is a guy who tells people when he thinks a show is good and when he thinks it's bad. No detailed box score has ever been compiled, but it could be that he praises more than he pans and that he's right more often than he's wrong.

In that case both the theaters and the paying public get a break.

But the Shuberts do not look at it that way. Apparently they can stand praise but not a rap and they would rather rule out praise altogether than stand one rap. If a play is not so hot, they'd rather not hear about it-or, at least, not have the paying public hear about it.

But the Shuberts seem to be overlooking the outstanding example of how adverse theatrical criticism boomeranged-Abie's Irish Rose. The critics gave it the works but the public ate it up. It ran for an almost interminable number of years on Broadway.

Perhaps somebody ought to recall Abie's Irish Rose to the Shuberts. They might be willing to lose the lawsuit if they could get enough adverse criticism to turn one of their productions into a hit like that.

Superiority In Weapons

THAT OFFENSIVE PAUSE which has currently overtaken the Axis nations may be due to efforts on their part to overtake the United Nations in quality of weapons. With the possible exception of Italy, the aggressor dictators started the war with weapon superiority.

In the case of Germany that superiority in 1939 and 1940 was so overwhelming that large nations were toppled in a matter of three or four weeks. In the case of Japan the weapon superiority may not have been impressive but the Japs had position and placement of weapons at the most effective points. Before the Allies could rush reinforcements to an endangered point, the Nipponese were in control.

Now America in the Pacific and Britain in Europe are achieving weapon superiority. Allied weapons are being placed at strategic points. And in every contest the combat superiority of United Nations weapons over that of the Axis is marked. It is undoubtedly worrying the dictators.

What Germany and Japan can do about it, if anything, is not apparent. Germany is already stretching its resources to the limit and is being forced to do without many vital materials formerly imported. Japan has added to its raw materials reservoir but is up against it for shipping, manufacturing capacity and skilled labor.

America and Britain seem to have a lead in weapon superiority that the Axis can never overcome. It is a lead that is growing greater day by day.

Good Statement Of a War Aim

IT has now been legally established that Naziism is a disease, not a political

Supreme Court Justice Joseph E. Mc-Geehan, of New York, made the statement in denying Warner Reiman custody of a three-year-old daughter after a divorce action. Testimony that Reiman had engaged in Nazi activities was given in court.

Justice McGeehan ruled that Reiman had been contaminated by the germ of Naziism, "which makes him unfit to rear and guide the destiny of any living thing."

"This court," said the judge, "finds that Naziism is not, as the father contends, a political belief-it is rather a diseased and depraved phenomenon, a plague which flourishes and thrives on the destruction and obliteration of everything American.

"It becomes the sacred duty of all Americans to safeguard and protect the rising generation from the ravages wrought

That's about as good a statement of one of America's principal war aims as has

Wild Things in Cages

Wild canaries lived near our house when I was a boy . . , and we would set traps for them, They were not pretty birds; they were not all yellow like the tame canaries that live in cages; but they were happy little creature. with yellow breasts and they sang joyfully in the mornings We wanted to catch them and

We made little wood-andwire cages, in two sections. In the lower half we caged a female as a lure. The upper half was a trap. A trusting bird-fellow flew into the top part and lit on a perch tha collapsed from his weight and trapped him. . . . I remember how we would lie for hours in Marshall Massits the dry grass, catching those wild canaries. mournful when our luck was bad, shouting and running when at last we had a frightened little bird in a trap.

We took them home and put them in a larger cage and we were PROUD. They sang no more, but fluttered restlessly about in that big cage that was so much smaller than the outdoors. They lost heart and moped. They lost feathers and sickened. Finally, they died. No matter how hard we tried, we couldn't keep the wild canaries alive. They would not sing for us and they would not live for us-though we were willing to do anything but set them

And often since then I have thought of those wild things that would not live in cages. I've thought of them when I tried to compel happiness to come to me, when I've seen other people trying to own what cannot be owned, cage things that cannot be caged. I've seen many men and women as thoughtless as those small boys we were, as ignorant, as cruelly

The best of life is wild but we do not know that. The greatest peace comes when we are not seeking it. We are most contented when we do not know we are contented. We are best when we are least aware of our quality. And nothing worthwhile can be trapped, caged, commanded to be happiness. . . . Why cannot I remember that always?

Wheeler May Run For Presidency, Stewart Says

By CHARLES P. STEWART Central Press Columnist

WASHINGTON, - Speaking of possibilities for a 1944 presidential nomination, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Mon-

I don't mean to say that he dentially named at a Democratic or Republican on vention, but there's increasing alk of a third party's organizaion, and Burton

Burton K. Wheeler could head such a lineup's ticket very suitably. His official label has been and still is Democratic and he says he wants it to remain so, provided the Democrats stay democratic, but, according to the senator, they show symptoms that he expresses himself extremely suspicious of. And the Republicans, he adds, show the same symptoms.

Opposes Federation

The symptoms the Montana lawmaker refers to, he describes as those of a lapse into chronic "internationalism.

He raises no objection to a temporary attack of it, for war purvigorous and united prosecution of the Allied powers' activities against the Axis. He's super-energetically opposed, though, to anything even remotely in the nature of a postwar, peacetime federation of countries, such as advance planners here and in Britain have suggested. Or, if this sort of a federation actually does develop, Senator Wheeler's vote is violently to have the U. S. A. boycott it.

It's a scheme that's been a good bit canvassed of late,

It hasn't been definitely doped out yet, but its general terms are pretty obvious.

On Order of U. S.

The theory is that the genuine democracies (our own, the rest of the Americas, the Britons, the Chinese, the Fighting French and maybe the Mussolini-freed Italians) are to cohere, not quite as closely our our United States do, but substantially resembling us. Russia'll be a puzzle, but it can wait until the time comes. And we're to take charge of the German and Jap education systems, and run them until they're civilized.

It's a program that's been vaguely discussed for quite awhile, but with no particularly reliable spon-

The other day, however, Vice President Henry A. Wallace sketched it middling specifically, in a broadcast in every direction. That was what stirred up Senator Wheeler. He hadn't paid much attention to earlier propagandists, but he considered Henry Wallace entitled to a return jab, and he delivered one.

Among other things, the senator's surmise was that President Roosevelt inspired Henry's outburst. The president, to be sure, related that he hadn't pre-read the Wallace utterance. Nevertheless, the impression was that Henry wouldn't have uncorked it without presidential approval. Burton accordingly accepted it as an administrative utterance.

The Montanan 's "ag'i'n" it.

His voice is for a White House change, on the supposition that that's the philosophy of the executive mansion's present occupant or anybody he picks to succeed him.

Willkie Winner?

But alternately?

Burton takes it that Wendell Willkie will be the contrary nominee and his forecast is that Wendell will get it.

Well, Wendell, is as international as anybody.

He's so proclaimed himself. This leaves the anti-internationalists out on a limb-Senator Wheeler as a leader among 'em. As Senator Wheeler sees it, a third ticket is their only recourse.

That it can win is poor betting. If the war's still going, it won't stand a show. If it's ending or ended there may be an argument. Burt Wheeler has wormed into the foregront of the discussion.

He's a forcible character. A peculiar feature of the situation is that Burt, a vehement economic radical, is in the same crew, as to post-war economics, with eco-

A Prayer Answered

"The little boy in my boat (Pvt. John F. Bartek) had an isssue Bible in the pocket of his jumper, and the second day out we organized little prayer meetings in the evening and morning and took turn about reading passages from the Bible, and frankly and humbly we prayed for our deliverance."

"Eddie" Rickenbacker spoke reverently when he came to this part of his dramatic story of how he and his companions were rescued after drifting twenty-one days in tiny rubber boats. It was within an hour after the eight men had turned their thoughts to God that a sea gull alighted on the head of the senior officer and leader of the expedition -Colonel Rickenbacker himself-and this furnished them food and bait that brought stil Imore sustenance. What the revens were to Elijah, the sea gull was to those American aviators on the Pacific.

What turned the thought of these eight men to the source of all good, to the preserver of man, his "refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble"? Private Bartek's little khaki Bible. True, they probably would have prayed even without a Bible. Most men do in such circumstances. But the little Book proved an immediate inspiration. Private Bartek's Bible was the most valuable piece of equipment they possessed. With it they proved the promise: "He shall call upon me, and I will answer him: I will be with him in trouble; I will deliver him, and honour him."

REPORTS TO PRESIDENT

Milton Eisenhower (above), brother of Lieut, Gen, Dwight D. Eisenhower, commander in chief of the Allied forces in French North Africa, is shown leaving the White House after he had made a report to the president on North Africa.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5-The South would go Republican today, if the Republican party offered an alternative to the existing national Democratic lead-

I have found, in a trip through five southern states, irrefutable evidence that all the South and border states. with the possible exception of Florida, are in an extreme condition of psychological political revolution. I think it is a revolt against the use of totalitarian methods (centralized Washington government) in a democracy.

This has nothing to do with the war cause. Everyone wants to win it, and nearly everyone is helping. In the sparse reports which have been published about the condition. it has been attributed to racial and some minor religious feelings.

These sentiments exist widely and dangerously, but, in my opinion, they are symptoms of sounder causes. True, the opposition has taken that form.

New Conviction

It is impossible to analyze the human heart to prove the degree to which persons are animated by various causes, but I judge, from personal observation in talks with innumerable people in all walks of life, that a wholly new popular conviction about government itself is the real cause of the trouble in the South-and elsewhere.

The whole popular position of the country seems to have undergone alterations, and the alterations have not been sufficiently noted in Washington.

Up to now, the government has been inclined to look upon its opposition as a reactionary resistance to its moral crusade. The administration attributed its troubles to the rich, to business and sometimes to the newspapers and the Republi-

There is now no organized political opposition. Business is cooperating with the government-or under it. The rich no longer exists as an entity or a power. They know that their riches either have already or soon will vanish under existing taxation.

Old Forces Not To Blame

The press, as a whole, shows no evidence of political campaigning except for the war cause, and the Republican party, as an organized force of opposition, is nowhere in evidence on a scale commensurate with the size of this new popular sentiment - certainly not in the

The administration cannot blame these old forces now

The opposition this time is unorganized and unstirred by any of the normally functioning political spoons. It seems to be solely a spontaneous attitude reaching down through the middle classes of this middle class country I think it is the result of the personal experience of the vast masses with government in this war, Multitudinous regulations and taxes of centralized Washington government, which formerly hit the rich or business, have, for the past year, been hitting every individual. Each man has found a new political doctrine from this personal experience. He has not merely developed irritations, but he has come in contact with centralized controls, reforms, "new ways," and he has developed a revulsion against centralized government as an efficient way of running his democracy. He has learned the inefficiencies and inequalities first hand.

The administration has indicated 26,000 speakers may be sent out to explain away this trend. It will do no good. You cannot explain away by words something a man already has decided from personal experi-

The weight of the press, the radio and the movies can have but little effect one way or another. If all were abolished today, or had been abolished since the start of the war. the dissatisfaction would be much more widespread than it is.

Such new political sentiments always seek a dramatized outlet of expressions such as the racial problem in the South (it takes other forms in the East or West) or jokes about Mrs. Roosevelt and such comparatively less consequential forms.

Race Problem Serious

True, the race problem is critical. A spark may touch it off. The South is prepared and will handle the problem in its own way, regardless of advice or interference from other sections, although the results may be lamentable for all concerned.

But my point is that even this problem is based upon personal experience with domestic help, high wages, liquor, and, therefore, beyond argument. It seems to me the only way the government can reach and cure this. as well as the deeper problem, is by a careful government reorganization and a Washington reformation.

Our main troubles certainly will be ameliorated if changes in the cabinet and in administration bureaus bring a more benevolent and efficient direction in regulating, rationing, drafting, taxing.

First, there must come a change of attitude. The problem is well illustrated by Leon Henderson's Sunday night statement, still maintaining that the people had not felt the "real pinch," of war, "had felt no pain," "had more money," etc. In this, he assumed, as always, that the government was doing its part, but the people were having it easy.

The people do not look at it that way, and no amount of speeches or organized publicity will make them abandon a conviction founded on their personal experience of direct contact with centralized govern-

Unless a mutual condition of confidence between government and people is established by the government taking the first step now (the appointment of Henderson's successor is an excellent opportunity), the mutually unsatisfactory condition will continue into serious consequence.

Alibi Hindrance Requires Remedy, Lawrence Says

By DAVID LAWRENCE

the citizen tries

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5. - This place ought to be known as the alibi capital of the world. For as to discover what to which he must iar problem, he is be sent to two or three others. The most flag rant example the alibi practice is in connection with rationing. The OPA claims it isn't responsible for the delays that made it difficult to get rationing of fuel oil under way before the cold season started The OPA also claims that it isn't responsible for the matter of supply, and that this is a question wholly within the jurisdiction of the petroleum administrator Then, there is the Office of Defense Transportation, which issues rules and regulations relating to the use of trucks and rail carriers that transport oil.

Citizens Misinformed

Again, governmental agencies urge the public to convert to coal The citizen is assured that the cut might be as much as twenty-five per cent but he isn't told it might be as much as seventy per cent. The citizen, meanwhile, tries to get equipment to convert his furnace to coal. Maybe he's fortunate in being able to find the right equipment. Or maybe he runs up against the fact that priorities have to be obtained—then the WPB comes into

But the citizen isn't interested in all the ramifications of jurisdiction that seem to enmesh the bureaus here. He looks to the governmenthis government-to make out his ration and tell him what it wants done. He isn't concerned with the jealousies or frictions between bureaus or departments. He knows only that his government is a single entity in the imposition of its restrictive power

Irresponsible Set-up

Under a system of responsible government such as exists in what are known as parliamentary system countries, the administration in power can be turned out of office overnight because of the acts of any of its constituent groups, whether legislative or administrative. In the United States there is a sort of irresponsible set-up whereby no one agency can be held to account, and, as a consequence, each agency can point to another in an alibi as to authority and jurisdiction.

Price Administrator Henderson says he wasn't tough enough and that if he had it to do over again, he would be even "tougher." But the place where he ought to have gotten tough was with some of his official brethren, or mayhap with his theoretical boss-the chief executive For if Mr. Henderson was right about his program, he didn't get the proper support at the top. This, by the way, is the customary complaint among the bureaucrats. namely, that they are not helped as against other agencies whose authority overlaps or whose powers have not been made clear.

The persons who thought up all the curious questionnaires and complicated ration system for the farmer to get gas for his trucks, for instance, try to shift the blame. They can always say they consulted someone in industry. But industry has its inefficient planners, too. And the citizen isn't interested so much in who was consulted but who thought up all the queer ways to ration and then forgot there was a simple matter of transportation and supply involved. People who have coupons and find it hard to get oil because deliveries have broken down or because there has been a maldistribution aren't interested in the fact that one agency didn't get busy soon enough or that someone else held up the regulations because of a complexity of legal or other obstacles. The citizen expects his government to have known as early as last summer what its probable oil supply problem would be and to have taken measures to meet it, telling the public the facts forthrightly and preparing for the restrictions in a sensible and candid

Alibis Plentiful

The army and navy have similar matters of organization and supply and delivery, and these armed services cannot make alibis to the effect that the weapons didn't arrive on time. It is always somebody's business to see that the supplies reach the front in time for

In this war there is no over-all commander on the civilian front. The president has delegated all sorts of tasks to different individuals, but he hasn't cleared up the duplications and overlappings, and that's why the alibis are so numerous. In truth, the president is to blame for the mistakes of his subordinates, and yet he can'e supervise them in person. Maybe if the parliamentary system were in vogue, there would be more care in selecting the so-called administrators in the first place.

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D | pointed out that while cold and one of the small meibomian glands part in its prevention. inflammatory rheumatism-and we likely to be more prevalent should take special precautions to see that the children are not exposed o cold and dampness

One eminent authority says that poverty and not dampness is the predisposing factor One argument in favor of this view it that the incidence of acute inflammatory heumatism is lowest among pupils n private schools, next lowest in the rural schools and highest in the public schools all over the

Studies of families where acute inflammatory rheumatism has hit show that the average size family in this group consists of 7.5 persons per family This indicates that persons in low income groups with large families have to spread the milk, butter, eggs, meat and fresh vegetables "too thin."

Treatment

When acute inflammatory rheu matism has hit a child, the treat ment consists of rest in bed, applications to the swollen joints, and the use of the salicylic drugs, of which aspirin is the most available.

The most serious feature about the infection is that it hits the heart worse than it does the joints and joint inflammation may disappear quickly but the heart damige may be permanent. reason the experienced physician demands that a child who has had acute inflammatory rheumatism should be kept in for from six weeks to two months.

This is by no means an easy bit of advice to carry out, but it has been proved by careful observation that the children who have had this long period of restful convalescence have a very much smaller incidence of heart disease than those who are allowed to be up and about as soon as the fever has subsided.

The mother and father who think is hard on the child to stay in bed for this long a period should consider that time spent in this way may mean a saving of twenty to thirty years in the individual's

Heart Trouble

The heart trouble does not show up immediately on the subsidence of an attack of infiammatory rheumatism. It may not appear unti the afflicted individual is 30 or 40 years old. When the damage shows up at this time of life, there is no treatment which will be effective in really making a restoration of the heart to normal conditions. The best that can be done is to carry the individual along with heart stimulants and patch him up from time to time and perhaps prolong his life from ten to fifteen years This period, which is not spent in comfort, would seem to be an undue enalty to assess against a period of six weeks to two months in removed, but there is no guarantee bed after the acute attack. that they won't.

DON'T HAVE ANY RULE RATHER THAN follow a set rule about covering an honor led from the dummy-or letting the first of touching honors go by and then covering the second one—a sound defensive player is better off to have no rule at all in the matter. That is, if he is going to apply his rule automatically If his rule is going to have an exception attached to it—such as "don't cover either time, when common sense tells you not to"then he is truly playing the game.

Most pairs reached that contract in a social duplicate, some | back to civilian practice!" of them starting with 1-No Trump because of the great strength, despite the fact that the hand has no spade stopper. Every one of these declarers received a spade lead, and all but two of them made their contract, the difference being not in what they did themselves, but in what East did In each case, the spade A was held up until the third round and then the club Q led from dummy. Where East covered this, under the unsound rule of "cover an honor with an honor," South easily ran five tricks in clubs, two in diamonds, two in hearts and one in spades for an extra trick. Where East ducked the club Q and South played the 10, then East covered the J, the same result was achieved.

Only two of the East players ducked both the Q and J when clubs were led. They held the declarer to three tricks in the suit by blocking it, and he therefore could not find any way to take more than a total of eight tricks.

Those with War Contracts. Other Essential Plants and Unions Expected To (o-operate

A seven-point program will be submitted to employers holding war contracts, those engaged in industries essential to the war effort and to the union organizations of those industries, it was announced yes terday by the Cumberland Area War Manpower Committee, after the la bor-management group of eigh men had approved the plan under which it will operate.

To effectuate its responsibilities the area committee, comprising Edmund F. Burke, Charles A. Piper Robert L. Stallings and Harry F representing management and F. Patrick Allender, Harry A. Porch, John P. Dolphin and George A. Meyers, representatives of labor, recommends compliance on the par of all employers in the area pos sessing war contracts, and such other employers in the area who may voluntarily wish to comply with the following program:

Includes Agriculture

Employers will refuse to hire or solicit workers from war contractors or farms within the area, unless the applicant presents a certificate of release from his former employer or from the Review Unit of the United States Employmen Service. Workers whose requests for the certificate are refused by the employer may appeal to the Review Unit. Workers or employers may appeal any decision of the Review Unit to the Cumberland Area
